designer of cloaks at $125 a week, and and it came to the turn of the visiting his counter suit, in which he asks that minister to examine the boys.

She was a widow by decree of the discorrect court, and he was widower with two boys, Alex and Leo Diamond, when they were married Jan. 19, 1907. The they were married Jan. 19, 1907. The mair then went to live at No. 310 West wickendess of these bad brothers?"

"What great crime and the difference of Joseph of Joseph commit?"

"They sold their brother Joseph."

"Twenty pieces of silver."

"And what added to the cruelty and wickendess of these bad brothers?" they were married Jan. 19, 1907. The pair then went to live at No. 310 West One Hundred and Twentieth street, in a flat house owned by Mrs. Diamond.

tions of Lawyer Leo R. Brilles, said Mr. Diamond allowed his boys, sixteen and twenty years old, respectively, to make life a burden for her; that they played tricks on her until she had them summoned before Magistrate Crane in the Harlem Court Christmas week, 1907. The Magistrate did not punish them, and shortly afterward she left Max in possession of their apartment.

Stepson Abused Her, She Says. She said that Alexander called her "Doggie, doggie, doggie," and enapped his fingers and chirruped to her. Worse, he took her face in his hands and ssed it so hard as to leave marks of his fingers, bumped her head against the wall and otherwise roughly treated her—all in the presence of his father, who not only refused to interfere but laughed at it and, on one occasion, when she yelled for help and a neighbor came he put himself against the door and barred the enrance of the rescuer.

All of which Mr. Diamond, who is small and elderly, denies, and says she had a nasty temper, was despotic and abandoned him and his boys in January, 1908, after a course of conduct inconsistent with the character of a wife.

Mrs. Diamond said he capped the climax of his fill-treatment of her by taking her picture from her trunk and giving it to a newspaper for publication in connection with the police court episode, Dec. 31, 1907. As soon as she could she sold her flat-house, on which there was a $20,000 mortgage, and sued him for a separation. She applied for $25 weekly alimony and $250 counsel fees, but Diamond told of her ownership of the house and the police court case, and Justice Erianger would grant no alimony and allowed only $30 counsel fee.

Justice Newburger asked, "Where are

Justice Newburger asked, "Where are these song?"
"Right here, Your Honor," said Leon R. Jacobs, counsel for Diamond, and two fine specimens of youth stood in their places. "Alex. Is a senior at the DeWitt Clinton High School and Leo is slyten."

"Last Word" Models in 3-piece Suits of Fine Chiffon Panama---An Exceptional Offer at $32.50

All Greenhut Suit models must be "different"-each model is created with sincere thought and study of the trend of fashion, with an additional touch of clever originality, giving that dash of distinctiveness, that swerving line, contour and "hang" that places them so far above the ordinary factory made, thousand-of-a-kind suits, making the strongest appeal to women of smart taste and discrimination in matters of fashion.

Perhaps the best evidence of this distinctiveness is the increasing patronage of particular women who have abandoned the tedious and expensive made-to-order methods for the allsatisfying Greenhut ready-tailored suit models. The most exacting of them agree to our superiority in materials, style and workmanship, and acknowledge a direct saving of a
